

End Products

There is already a wide range of quality products available that are produced using recycled plastic. Plastic often provides best value over other materials because of its durable nature and long life. For example plastic is especially suitable for use in water-side locations as, unlike other materials such as wood, it requires little or no maintenance.

Many local authorities and businesses now purchase products made using recycled plastic and information on green procurement can be obtained from WRAP (the Waste and Resources Action Programme), or DEFRA. There remains a need to broaden awareness of the range of products available, however, and the Buy Recycled campaign and Waste Watch's UK Recycled Products Guide go some way toward addressing this issue.

Also, the Government has provided WRAP with more than £40 million of funding for the three year period commencing 2001-2002, with the aim of removing barriers to waste minimisation, re-use and recycling and creating stable and efficient markets for recycled material and products.

The Recoup website (www.recoup.org) now has a section showcasing a range of end products that are made using recycled plastics (Table 4), including supplier details; the National Recycling Forum's website (www.recycledproducts.org.uk) lists a range of products made from other recycled material.
